Customer Reviews

MICHAEL CONNELLY is a former journalist and the author of over a dozen bestselling books, including the Harry Bosch novels and Blood Work, which was a major motion picture. He has won numerous awards for his journalism, as well as an Edgar Award, a Nero Wolfe prize, a Macavity Award, and an Anthony Award for his books. Michael Connelly lives in Florida. Lee Horsley is Lecturer at University of Lancaster. Her books include Political Fiction and the Historical Imagination (1990), Fictions of Power in English Literature 1900-1950 (1995), and The Noir Thriller (2001). In collaboration with her daughter, Katharine, she has written several articles on crime fiction and started a highly successful website devoted to the academic study of crime fiction and film; she is also co-editor and webmaster for Pulp Originals, which aims to make some of the best mid-century American crime paperbacks available as e-books.

In Connelly's first short story, Lee Horsley tells the story of P.O. Stillwell, who trails a recent parolee who owes the gang that helped him during his jail time. As Stillwell gets closer to the perp, he finds the gang's pay-back requirement is his death (at Dodger Stadium). Horsley's pace is perfect, and listeners will be wanting more. Fortunately, there's Elmore Leonard's CHICKASAW CHARLIE HOKE. Dan Cashman tells the story of Charlie's quest to land a job as a celebrity host at Vegas's
