Bree Kessler's first visit to the Big Island of Hawai'i was as a summer volunteer, picking pineapples on an organic farm. This experience with farming sparked an interest in urban agriculture; she returned to academia to pursue a PhD at the City University of New York in environmental psychology-the study of how people and places interact with one another. Bree has taught courses on a variety of topics at the University of Hawai'i-Hilo, Hunter College, and the School for International Training. Outside of academia, she has a second career as a freelance writer. Her work has appeared in publications such as Honolulu Magazine, Edible Hawaiian Islands, Women's Adventure, and Wine Enthusiast. Bree has lived abroad in China, Honduras, India, South Africa, and Thailand, volunteered with the National Park Service in northern Alaska, and traveled extensively throughout Latin America. Although Bree currently splits her time between Hawai'i and Alaska, she always returns to the Big Island and her true vocation: exploring her island home and sharing its spirit of aloha. great travel guide as expected by Moon books

This is the only guide to the Big Island you will ever need. Packed with locals-only details for a real ohana spirit trip. Get the Tuk-Tuk truck thai food in Volcanoes, and don't miss the insider knowledge about the manta ray night swim. This book helped make a perfect, memorable trip. You can't tell from the page, but the photos are A+!
