Acupuncture Case Histories From China

Synopsis

This book marks the first original collection of acupuncture case histories in English. Included are over one hundred case histories contributed by prominent practitioners of acupuncture in China. The case histories represent a broad spectrum of disorders for which acupuncture is used in contemporary China. Each of the case histories provides a thorough discussion of the traditional Chinese diagnosis and syndrome differentiation, together with the points and techniques selected for treatment. The course of therapy is described, and alterations in the diagnosis and treatment regimen are analyzed. The results of treatment—both favorable and unfavorable—are noted. An introduction compares and contrasts many of the treatment techniques and types of points used in the cases.

Customer Reviews

"This highly recommended book offers a very revealing, over-the-shoulder look at the work of several contemporary Chinese acupuncturists." --CCA Phoenix
"One of the most interesting and valuable acupuncture books yet published in English." --The Journal of Chinese Medicine

Chen Jirui, M.D. (1930-2004) graduated from Peking Union Medical College in 1957. In 1984, Dr. Chen was among the founders of the Journal of Traditional Chinese Medicine, the first English language periodical on this discipline published in China. He also served on the faculty of the China Academy of Traditional Chinese Medicine. After immigrating to the United States, he served as director of research at the East West Medical Research Institute in Los Angeles, and was co-editor-in-chief of the International Journal of Clinical Acupuncture. He was also a research scientist at Cedars-Sinai Medical Center, an instructor at SAMRA University, and director of research at Tongyuan International. Nissi Wang, M.S. is a graduate of Case Western Reserve University (B.A. in History, 1977), Johns Hopkins University School of Hygiene and Public Health (M.S. in Pathobiology, 1980), and the Beijing College of Traditional Chinese Medicine (Postgraduate Certificate, 1983). From 1984-87 Ms. Wang worked as a medical editor at the People's Medical Publishing House, and then at the Chinese Academy of Medical Sciences in Beijing. She currently works as a medical editor and translator, and has collaborated on several books including Manual of Dermatology in Chinese Medicine, The Illustrated Dictionary of Chinese Acupuncture and Acupuncture Case Histories from China.

Practical, easy to read and treatment principle, explanation of points are easy to understand.

Whether you are working hard to pass the state board exam or just want to study up for your practice. This is a most important book with understandable information.

Very nicely written, this book has detailed case histories. Very easy to read and comprehend. This book is not expensive either.
